There was a whole complex of these things in Sydney, they made a complete circle through the city, only to be found here. They are quite dangerous when they are being provoked, as the one I fought was a double agent. The name may be a reference to "cloning" technology used by the aliens, but I don't think this is accurate. Binary Bot is a form of humanity, created from cell derived DNA. When thousands of humans died, the DNA was set loose by the extraterrestrial beings. These have been programmed for the specific purpose of hunting and killing aliens. They are very hardy and have no fear of any human. Binary Bot vs. C-4 A number of Binary Bot and C-4 and H-Bot will be used in this game. The length of each deployment is 10 seconds. Playtesting A binary bot kills faster than a C-4. It can take a simple kill shot to the head. Each C-4 costs $1.05. Each H-Bot costs $1.50. Resources: Here are the data packs that contain this scenario. - Scenario Data Pack: Contains a map, rules, and starter assets. The two deployment templates are included in the scenario data pack. - Scenario Rules: Contains the game rules, player aids, and the scenarios. In this scenario, there are no special game rules, but there are game aids that you should be aware of. • Game Aids: o Battle Aids: Contains the Assault and Sniper game aids. o Event Log: Provides a handy log of the deployment process. o Deployments: Contains two deployment templates. • Optional Rules: o I2R: This optional rule describes how to handle any special events and equipment that may be deployed. o Equipment: Contains the weapons and equipment that you should use. In this scenario, each player should use one of the weapons. There is a unique version of the Sonic gun that should be used, but no reasons to use that are given. Deployment Timer: Allows the players to delay a deployment. • Optional Deployments: o Ambush: Allows you to deploy the second player after the first deployment is complete. o Kill Command: Allows the second player to kill an enemy if a normal shot would not work. • 82157476af
